1. The Russians have concentrated three armored divisions and large stores of ammunition in a forest between Polska Nowa Wies, Mysa and Komprachcice.* This area is also used as a maneuver site. Munitions and tanks are transported by railroad to the village of Komprachcice. From here, supplies are moved by trucks to the forest near the village of Ochota. Transportation takes place only at night and the entire area is sealed off by the Russians. Headquarters of the tank divisions is at Opole.

* [REDACTED] Comment: This figure appears exceptionally high; it is even questionable if there are three Soviet tank divisions in all Poland, although one qualified source has reported a total of three armored divisions in Poland in 1950. In the Opole (50040'N 17057'E) area three tank regiments have frequently been reported [REDACTED] identified these units as being equipped with light, medium and heavy tanks.

 [REDACTED] Comment: Maneuvers have previously been reported in this area; [REDACTED]

 [REDACTED] Comment: See attached sketch.
